E. Prairie man whips girl, 4, draws 90 days

CHARLESTON — Tommy Hamblin of East Prairie was sentenced to 90 days in the Mississippi County jail Thursday by Magistrate T. J. Brown Jr. after he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of mistreatment of a child.

The offense occurred on or about March 29, and the child involved Hamblin's 4-year old stepdaughter Tina Farrell, whom he is charged with whipping with a belt or strap, leaving bruises on her buttocks and back. An investigation is being conducted by the Mississippi County Welfare Department.

In a trial by court, Michael Gunther of Sikeston was found guilty of driving while intoxicated and was fined $126.30. Witnesses in the case were Cpl. Ronald Roach, a Cairo, Ill., policeman, and Trooper Ronald Ryan of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

According to Roach's testimony, he observed a car, driven by Gunther, speeding through Cairo Feb. 11. He said he turned on his red light and siren and proceeded to follow the car across the bridge into Missouri after using his radio to call for assistance from the Missouri State Highway Patrol

Gunther stopped his car across the bridge on the Missouri side of the river and Roach said he informed Gunther he was under arrest for speeding.

Ryan testified he arrived at the scene about 1:45 a.m. Feb. 11 and that Gunther and two passengers in the car were taken to the Charleston police department where he gave Gunther a breathalyzer test and placed him under arrest for driving while intoxicated.

A defense motion that the charge be dismissed on the grounds that the arrest was invalid since the offense was not committed in the presence of Ryan, was overruled by Judge Brown.

Lee Childress of Diehlstadt was bound over to Circuit Court after he waived a preliminary hearing on a charge of tampering with a motor vehicle. Childress, who remains in custody under $1,000 bond, is charged with driving off in a truck owned by Gus Heckman on March 14 without permission.

Roger Mannon of East Prairie pleaded not guilty to a charge of rape and a preliminary hearing, requested by the defendant, was set for April 11.

The alleged rape, which involves an East Prairie girl under the age of 16, reportedly occurred Feb. 4 in East Prairie. Mannon remains in custody under $5,000 bond.

Fantina Backus was given a suspended 10-day jail sentence and placed on one-year probation on a disturbing the peace charge. Conditions of the probation include obeying the law and staying away from the Fred Penn home.

An attorney was appointed to defend Arnold Lee Mims of Charleston against a charge of burglary, involving breaking and entering. He is accused of breaking a side window at Economy Furniture Store in Charleston March 27 with felonious intent to burglarize and steal.

James "Johnny" Campbell pleaded not guilty to a common assault charge and trial was set for April 18. He was released on his own recognizance.

William Joseph Walls and Brenda Reynolds each paid a $16 fine on a charge of violating the wildlife code by fishing without a permit. Linda Ann Moore of East Prairie paid a $21 fine for improper registration, and Nolen Grigsby of Charleston paid a $41 fine on charges of careless and imprudent driving and driving with an expired operator's license.

ERA dead this year

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The controversial Equal Rights Amendment, subject of thousands of letters to Missouri legislators, will not come to a vote again this year as the result of Senate action Thursday.

The Senate voted to stop printing its perfection, or firstround approval, calendar, because the end of the 1974 session is only three weeks away. There are several hundred House-approved bills and Senate bills given first-round approval that must be dealt with.

The Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), which failed in the Missouri legislature last year, was 17th from the top of the first-round approval calendar, which contained about 70 bills. The Senate worked all morning on the calendar, which contained about 70 bills before adjouring for the weekend.

The sponsor, Sen. Raymond Howard, could have and still can, take the bill up out of order if he can get 23 votes from the 34 senators.

"I can't get 23 votes," he said.

Howard attempted to put it on a separate calendar Thursday but withdrew the motion, preventing a roll call vote by only about a dozen senators. Most had left the Senate chamber.

"I'll introduce it again next year and I think it'll pass," Howard said. The states have five more years in which to ratify the era. Thirty-three of the necessary 38 states have ratified it.

Minds could change and there may be some new faces because of the 1974 elections, he noted.

After several senators mentioned on the floor that Howard could have tried early to get consideration of the ERA out of order, Howard said, "I didn't have 23 votes then and I don't now. It wouldn't have made any difference."

Two months ago, Howard charged that the majority floor leader, Sen. Lawrence J. Lee, D-St. Louis, hurt the ERA's chances because he delayed reporting the jesolution out of committee, letting 25 bills get ahead of it on the calendar. Lee opposed the resolution in committee.

Most of the legislative leaders have endorsed ERA.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who supports the ERA, commented, "It shows a desire to avoid a vote on the issue, which is not a very courageous way out."

Bond also said he was concerned about the Senate's preliminary approval of a bill to raise legislators' salaries from $8,400 to $10,800 a year, saying the legislature should turn its attention to more important problems.

The pay raise bill was on a list of bills put out by Bond's office for Republican House members, urging them to vote no.

The Senate gave preliminary approval to a bill putting operation of the state license fee offices in the hands of local government officials.

It allows cities and counties to raise the fee for each license transaction from 40 to 50 cents, and allows the Revenue Department to set up new Revenue Department branch offices.

The Revenue Department has asked for money to add 125 new employes and add 11 new branch offices, giving the department 22.

Jobless rate dips

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment dipped slightly from 5.2 per cent to 5.1 per cent of the work force in March, the government said today. It was the first decline in five months and raised hopes that the rise in joblessness that began with the Arab oil embargo may have topped out.

The Labor Department considered the drop of one-tenth of one per cent statistically insignificant but government analysts said the figures did suggest stability in the job picture.

The nation's unemployment rate jumped from a 3½-year low of 4.6 per cent in October to 5.2 per cent in January as the impact of the fuel shortage spread through the economy. It held steady in February at 5.2 per cent.

The Nixon administration had forecast a sharp rise in unemployment in the first half of the year but with joblessness averaging about 5.5 per cent over the full year. Some private economists had predicted the rate would top six per cent.

According to today's report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, total employment remained essentially unchanged for the second consecutive month at 85.9 million in March while the number of people not at work edged down from 4.7 million in February to a seasonally adjusted 4.6 million.

Since October about 530,000 persons had been reported thrown out of work mostly as a result of the direct or indirect effects of the energy crisis.

The government said that although white-collar employment has continued to expand at a strong pace, rising by more than 800,000 over the October-March period, the gross was largely offset by a decline in blue-collar jobs, mainly due to layoffs in the auto industry.

Unemployment rates for most groupings in the labor force were mostly unchanged last month. The jobless rate for married men was 2.4 per cent; adult women 5 per cent; teenagers 15 per cent; white workers 4.6 per cents, and blacks 9.4 per cent.

Jobs in other goods-producing industries — construction and mining — declined by 40,000 over the month but in the service-producing industries employment remained unchanged last month following an unusually sharp gain of 240,000 in February.

Hearing set for knifing suspect

BLOOMFIELD— A preliminary hearing for Johnny Gene Rodgers of Dexter was set for April 11 after a Magistrate Court appearance before Judge Koss W. Blomeyer on a felonious assault charge.

Rodgers is being held in the Stoddard County jail under $2,000 bond in connection with the early Sunday morning wounding of his brother Danny Rodgers of Dexter Star Route who was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital in serious condition from a knife wound that punctured a lung.

Bond was set at $2,500 and a preliminary hearing was set on April 11 for Herman Ray Dunn of Malden on a charge of burglary and stealing. Dunn, along with Dwight Butler, Leonard Little and Jerry Lee Cluck, are accused of burglarizing Shipman's Rebel Market and Southeast Cooperative Service Co. in Dexter.

Marvin Howard Scott pleaded guilty to two charges of driving while intoxicated and was fined $100 on each charge and assessed a 60-day suspended jail sentence on the second count.

Ronald L. Franklin of Puxico, charged with careless and imprudent driving and driving while his license is revoked, entered a plea of not guilty and trial was set for April 25.

Kenneth Allen Juno of Beloit, Wis., was fined $100 and ordered to surrender his operator's license on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Fines were imposed for speeding against Patsy Ann Hobbs of Malden, $14, Harold Robert Rush Jr. of Wappapello, $19, Terry Calvin Bauman of Campbell, $20, Lloyd Everett Hitt of Advance, $10, and Anthony C. Bell of Dexter, $15.

Fined for careless and imprudent driving were Beverly Ann Ritch of Gray Ridge, $10, and James Leroy Depro Jr. of Dexter, $25.

Fined for driving without a license were Kenneth Lee Sterling of Broseley, $25, and Donald Ray Seamour, $10.

Arrests lead to recovery of tools

Floyd Porter III and his common law wife Imogene Barrick of 1013 Applegate are being held in the Sikeston city jail after being arrested Wednesday night in connection with a tool theft charge that turned up over $10,000 worth of tools which were confiscated in a search from his home and are believed to have been taken in a recent series of tool thefts, Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman said today.

Approximately $500 worth of tools, apparently stolen Wednesday night from three trucks parked at Ramada Inn on Highway 62 East, were found in Porter's car when he was stopped by highway patrolman Ronald Ryan.

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Bud Jones was called to the scene and arrested Porter and Miss Barrick for investigation of stealing.

On Thursday, Inman and Sikeston police detectives Dan Hinton and Sgt. Jack Patterson obtained permission from Porter to search his home where they discovered the large collection of tools. Inman

Raise approved

BENTON — The Scott County Court announced Thursday that effective April 1 all Scott County Highway Department employes received a $1 per day raise.

Plans are being made for countywide membership drives in Scott and New Madrid Counties.

Announcements of a featured speaker, party officials and distinguished guests for the convention will be announced at a later date.

BRING ON THE COAL

A recent newspaper ad by a group of power companies advises this: "America has more coal than the Middle East has oil. Let's dig it!"

We say, Amen.

The United States, as the phase goes, is the Saudie Arabia of the coal world. We have enough of the fossil fuel to last for at least 500 years. And, since we already use about 35 per cent of the world's energy, we're going to need it.

Even with the lifting of the Arab oil embargo, it will be many years before the U. S. could become self-sufficient in oil, given the best of possible circumstances. In the meantime, we face the uneasy choice of compromising the ideal environment we want to have and the power from coal that we must have. While other forms of energy such as nuclear power are necessary, clearly it will be a good while yet before they can supply a large percentage of U. S. energy needs.

In response to a national need for wider use of coal, the Nixon administration is now mobilizing a task force to work out details of expansion. "We've got to develop coal from its present 17.7 per cent of the national energy base" to the 45 per cent figure of "10 or 15 years ago," said Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton in discussing the task force.

Morton added that various Federal agencies dealing with energy will be represented in the task force and that the group will work with industry and labor leaders to prod them into greater use of coal.

We believe this development is constructive and necessary and we commend the Nixon administration for these tentative steps to move the nation closer to independence in energy.

PAPER SHORTAGE CAUSED BY PRICE CONTROLS

Supermarkets are asking shoppers to bring their own paper bags to the store to carry home their groceries. Many paper products are becoming scarce. Book and magazine publishers are worried that they won't be able to get enough paper to fulfill their commitments. Government paper supplies are the lowest in history.

This paper shortage, which affects everyone, stems from restrictive price controls. Low profits in the paper industry for several years have discouraged capital investment, and manufacturers are dropping money- losing lines.

Paper manufacturers are also selling more of their product overseas, where they can get a better return on their investment. According to J. Edmund Colloton Jr., manager of corporate financial and press relations at the St. Regis Paper Co., "For bleached raw pulp the price is $265 a ton in Europe and only $185 a ton in the U. S. In Japan they are paying even more. The controls simply have to be lifted to bring things into balance."

Union President Joseph Tonelli of the United Paperworkers agrees with management on this issue. He declares that the Cost of Living Council "must decontrol wages and prices in the paper industry. . . .Paper companies need profit levels that will permit them to generate internal cash. A higher rate of return on investment is essential in order to attract new additional capital if present needs are to be met." It's time the government displayed similar good sense. HLH

IS WRONG

While economists, politicians and anticapitalistic theorists debate the pros and cons of the free market system and such things as the cost of promotion and advertising to consumers, the system continues to function with amazing efficiency -- and continues to add zest and variety to the business of living. For some consumers, it holds surprises as well.

A news dispatch datelined Los Angeles tells of one of these surprises. It tells how a Los Angeles couple, newly wed and just starting housekeeping, won one million trading stamps on a television quiz program. When the happy couple figured up the value of the over 833 trading stamp books they received, they found they had enough stamps for $2,500 worth of merchandise. Winning such a prize, they said, "... couldn't have happened at a better time. Like most young married couples it seems like there are hundreds of things we need for the house ..." This couple went on a shopping spree. Their purchases with the trading stamps included two color television sets, bookshelves, a reclining chair, bedroom furniture, a radio, glassware, cookware, silverware, bathroom scales, a toaster, an ice crusher, an electric can opener, candlesticks, bedspreads, sheets and end tables.

This list of items speaks volumes for our economic system. In many lands, such luxuries simply are not available at any price, even if a young couple could afford them. In many cases, they would be hard put to obtain the bare necessities of housekeeping, let along the good things of life which the Los Angeles couple probably took for granted. One can only ask what is wrong with a system that produces so many things that make life a little easier and that so many people want? Maybe nothing is wrong -- it is something to think about.

SPACE DROPS KEEP FALLING ON OUR HEADS

Since Sputnik I opened the door to space exploration in 1957, men have placed more than 6,800 objects in earth orbit.

Of these, 3,891 had "decayed"— fallen from orbit— as of mid- October, reports the North American Defense Command's (NORAD) Space Defense Center in Colorado Srpings. They're coming down at the rate of about one a day."

Fortunately, most of them are burned up by atmospheric friction. Of those that do survive re- entry, the majority land in the oceans and seas which cover three- fourths of the earth's surface.

The chances of any object from space— a nose cone, spent rocket body or other miscellaneous junk— actually hitting someone are "very slight— about a billion- to- one shot," says the Center.

As far as is known, space-age debris claimed its first and only victim nearly 13 years ago when a 40- pound chunk of white- hot metal from a U. S. probe slammed to earth near a sleepy Cuban village and snuffed out the life of an inoffensively grazing cow.

But with sturdier materials and the increasing frequency of space launches, more fragments are expected to impact on land. Thus the Space Defense Center, using a world- wide network of radar and optical sensors, some of which can photograph an object the size of a basketball at 20,000 miles, conducts a 24- hour surveillance and computer analysis on decaying space objects.

It predicts the "geographic area envelope" of earth impact and issues warnings of potential re- entry object damage in much the same way as the weather bureau issues hazardous storm warnings— whatever good it does— for people, or cows.

We don't need to worry about some of the objects. For example, Explorer I, launched in December, 1962, is expected to stay up until the year 4207. Telstar I, in space since 1961, will oribt for 56 centuries, or until 7561.

PASSING THE TORCH

The space program has brought immeasurable benefits back to Earth. These have shown up in terms of better materials and design of consumer products, in new techniques and tools in medicine and surgery, in improved management procedures and quality control.

The chief executive of one of the nation's leading aerospace firms, the company chosen to build the space shuttle, has described the profession of engineering as "... a bridge for putting to use, for the benefit of all mankind, the total knowledge of the world." His company has been a leader in bringing the benefits of space technology back to Earth. But if the technology necessary to maintain the security of the nation, solve our social and environmental problems and move to build a better life for people everywhere is to be developed, it must be carried forward in the next generation by the young people who are choosing their careers in high schools and colleges today. The industry leader describes the work which his company is doing with public school systems, with student groups at the college level and with universities and technical schools to broaden "... student awareness and understanding of the importance of technology in our society." In new courses of training, emphasis is being placed on linking technological and social problems in the students' minds.

It is this kind of creative thinking and work by leaders in the aerospace industry which will help assure our national security and in the long run build dedication and price of achievement in young minds now developing. It is the next generation that must in its turn create the technology and gain the realistic understanding of social and political problems required to move ahead toward a better life for all people.

REALLY COMING

Across the nation, the flexibility and responsiveness of private enterprise in meeting the broadening needs and expectations of the buying public are being demonstrated on a massive scale. One of the most significant new developments is found in the formation of the Committee for Constructive Consumerism, organized as an arm of the Council of Better Business Bureaus. Serving on the Committee are the chief executive officers of a blue-ribbon list of some of the largest, oldest and most respected corporate enterprises in the nation, including such companies as Ford Motor Company, Coca Cola, J. C. Penney, Eli Lilly, General Electric General Mills and others.

Henry Ford II, speaking as chairman of the Committee for Constructive Consumerism, has said, "If the consumer has trouble in the marketplace, the problem begins with business and business can best solve it. We understand the dissatisfaction of many consumers and will make every effort to turn this situation around. The ultimate solution to the consumer's problems can be achieved only through open dialogue in an atmosphere of mutual trust and not through adversary action. We are dedicated to promoting that kind of dialogue." It is the purpose of the Committee to devise policies and take action to improve business performance in the marketplace and restore the confidence of consumers in American business.

This is an unprecedented collective effort by U. S. business firms to earn greater customer satisfaction for their products and services. It is designed to get consumerism back in the hands of business and out of the hands of extreme consumerists. It demonstrates a deep concern and an awareness on the part of corporate America that it must meet or exceed he expectations of the people of the U. S. by voluntary means if the nation is to avoid the trap of overly- restrictive consumerist legislation. Such restriction and conformity could destroy the ability of business enterprise to produce the variety and quality of goods and services desired by the American people. This would be a tragedy for all concerned.

With the kind of ground-swell response that is now building behind the private enterprise drive to meet the broadening needs of its customers, the chance of losing the ball game to the destructive and restrictive elements of the consumerist movement is lessened. U. S. business has never yet failed to produce what the people of the United States really wanted, and there is no reason to believe that it will fail to do so in this most crucial time.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol made a total of 150,430 arrests in 1973. This number was an increase of nearly one per cent over the number of arrests made by the Highway Patrol in 1972. Slightly more than 95 per cent of these arrests were classified as "traffic" or motor vehicle associated arrests. The remaining arrests were in the criminal misdemeanor and felony category.

There were 143,740 motor vehicle arrests made by the Patrol last year of which 75,232 were for hazardous moving violations. Among the offenses included in this category are those relating to driving while intoxicated.

The number of driving while intoxicated arrests classified as motor vehicle misdemeanors totaled 5,077 during 1973. There were also 136 driving while intoxicated felony arrests made by the Patrol. Under the Missouri Statutes the first two convictions for driving while intoxicated are misdemeanors, but the third are subsequent offenses are felonies.

The Highway Patrol's Commercial Motor Vehicle Division weighed 1,788,799 trucks last year. The division made 42,645 arrests and issued 130,311 warnings.

In addition to the arrests made by the Highway Patrol last year, the officers issued a total of 493,933 warnings to persons for minor infrations of the law.

Senator William J. Cason, D-Clinton, President Pro Tem of the Missouri Senate, appointed today a special bipartisan committee to recommend a code of ethics for Missouri Senators.

"It now appears," Cason said, "that in this short session we may not have an opportunity to pass on a bill setting forth ethics for all elected officials.

"Therefore, I am setting up a special committee of four members to presently answer questions of Senators concerning ethics and to recommend a code of ethics for Senators which we can incorporate in our rules next year. It is also fair and proper that before we impose a code of conduct and ethics on other elected officals we should impose one on ourselves first.

"This is the same pattern we followed in opening up Senate committee meetings to the public and the press before the Sunshine or open meetings bill was passed. It has worked very well and I am hopeful that we can do the same with a senatorial code of ethics."

Appointed to the committee were Senator William B. Waters, D-Liberty, chairman; Senator Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, the senior member of the Senate; Senator Richard M. Webster, R-Carthage, the minority caucus chairman, and Senator Paul L. Bradshaw, R-Springfield.

The committee would study the problem of ethical behavior for Senators in order to prevent conflicts of interest or appearance of impropriety, as well as rules of behavior within the Senate chamber while the Senate is in session.

Its recommendations would be made in time for them to be debated and incorporated in the 1975 Senate rules.

Nixon's Home Improvements

WASHINGTON-- President Nixon finally may have to answer for all the money the taxpayers have squandered on his seashore estates in California and Florida.

His tax returns have been investigated by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, whose staff has concluded that some of the home improvements were intended solely for his personal benefit and, therefore, should have been declared as extra, taxable income.

This may violate the Constitution, which states the President shall receive compensation for his services but "he shall not receive within that period (his presidential term) any other emolument from the United States...."

The story goes back to September 1972, when we began investigating reports that the President had charged the taxpayers for personal expenditures on his vacation homes.

We uncovered facts which my associate, Brit Hume, laid before the construction engineer, William Robinson, on September 28, 1972. This was reported back to Washington in a classified memo.

"Mr. Hume identified himself as being from Jack Anderson's office," stated the memo, "and was aware that Bill Robinson was the contracting officer at the Western White House, including the residence.

"It was apparent from the conversation that Mr. Hume was aware of all the contracts, scope of work, dollar amounts and contract numbers for all of the work which was done by Bill....Mr. Hume said it appeared there was something fishy going on and said he would like to see the records."

Instead of producing the records, the government covered them up. Nevertheless, we were able to report on October 3, 1972, that the taxpayers had helped to renovate the President's old Spanish villa at San Clemente, Calif. The President even stuck the taxpayers, we reported, for $13,500 to buy a new furnace.

Subsequently, we wrote about many other personal expenditures which the President squeezed out of the taxpayers. These ranged from $388.78 to stop the fireplace in his den from smoking to $621 for an icemaker that would make ice cubes without a hole in the middle. Even the cost of stamping his golf tees with the presidential logo came out of the public till.

Now, the President may have to count these expenditures as personal, taxable income. The final ruling, of course, will be up to the Internal Revenue Service which has been working closely with the congressional tax investigation.

On the House side, some Republicans are quietly trying to narrow the impeachment inquiry and to eliminate the question of home improvements. But others believe these expenditures violated the Constitution and, therefore, may be an impeachable offense.

NIXON PLAY: President Nixon's fatcat friend and million- dollar campaign contributor, Richard Mellon Scaife, sought in the early 1970s to buy the Washington Star newspaper to bring a pro-Administration voice to the nation's capital.

Sources close to the deal tell us that the President enthusiastically promoted the idea. If the Star were sold to liberals, he reportedly told Scaife, "we would lose a good friend in Washington."

The city's strongest newspaper is the liberal Washington Post which Nixon has always detested-- all the more now because of its Watergate exposes.

Scaife controls many of the Mellon millions and is also a power in Gulf Oil. His former executive aide, Herbert Frayer, confirmed that Scaife had wanted to buy the Star. The early talks fell through, Frayer told my associate Les Whitten, because the Star's owners wanted too much money.

Frayer said he was unaware that President Nixon encouraged Scaife to buy the paper. "It might have happened when Mr. Scaife was alone with him," speculated Frayer. "In any case, we didn't need any assurance that the President thought this would fit in with his own thinking. Washington needs two vigorous newspapers."

In the end, the Star's owners decided not to sell but to strengthen the paper instead by buying out the Scripps-Howard Daily News. Today, the Star- News is a vigorous newspaper, which has both befriended and opposed the President editorially.

FOOTNOTE: Scaife didn't return our calls.

CATTLE CAPER: Assistant Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, who helped set up a $45 million federal beef-buying program to aid cattle producers, happens to be a well- to- do cattle producer himself. The plan is a bonanza for cattlement, but a bomb for the housewives because it will keep beef prices artificially high.

Although Yeutter's farm in Nebraska nets him about $15,000 to $20,000 a year from cattle, he told us he sees only a "nominal" conflict in the fact he reviewed and advised on the plan as a member of the Commodity Credit Board.

The bright young Ph.D., who served as the President's top agriculture campaign aide, says he will lose money because, as an Agriculture official, he did not use "hedges" against beef losses available to other cattlemen.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

New Labor Frontier:

Union Chiefs Creating New 'Department' To Organize Millions of Public Employes Everywhere

NEW YORK-- If what's left of Union Square radicals here would, as once they did lustily, sing, "Arise ye prisoners of starvation," the haggard ranks of the oppressed would be thin indeed. This springs to mind with an analysis of the startling Transport Workers Union contract victory the other night which forced the Metropolitan Transportation Authority to begin paying subway toilet and window washers over $13,000 annually in "base pay."

This is exclusive of overtime (plenty) and coming cost of- living increases. Thus the lowest- skilled proletarian mopping up the underground will be paid in the next two years what motormen were getting in the recently expired contract. The subway engineers now will be receiving $15,000 annual base pay.

So it is being assumed that, when the new contract expires in two years, transit porters will move up and be paid $15,000 a year, plus. . .

Such victories, of course, come out of moneys from eventually rocketing fares, the industrial power to paralyze a city which such a well-organized union has, and from political clout.

This is the new frontier. It's what the in- house specialists call "the public sector"-- men and women working for the city, state and federal governments. It's the swiftest growing front. Ranging from teachers to "revenuers" to fire fighters to transit ticket-takers, from streetcleaners to sophisticated highly skilled scientists, the total comes to 14 million employes.

Fastest growing of unions in this field is Jerry Wurf's 650,000 American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. Biggest most self- "militant- izing" non- AFL-CIO force is the 1.4 million-member National Education Assn. (teachers) now striking or having just struck some of the nation's major cities.

Some time ago it occurred to "Howie" McClennan, International Fire Fighters Assn. (AFL- CIO) president, that all the unions in the field should be wrapped up in one mighty department of the massive labor federation. Then they could try to organize the seven to eleven million non-union public sector (government) workers.

For example, the federal government employs some 10,000 fire fighters. Only a few are unionized.

McClennan believes that one single public sector department could coordinate vast collective bargaining-- and so set a common policy on strikes during which some of the citizenry might die if, say, fire fighters or police take job action. Of which there have been some. Or during some long sanitation strike which literally puts a plague on all houses.

So the national fire fighters union official sponsored creation of a vast public sector organization.

McClennan, who once attended a White House banquet in a red shirt, conferred with labor's chief of chiefs, George Meany. The latter was "enthusiastic." So it went before the last national AFL- CIO convention.

And at the coming AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting on May 9, the odds are that a new department of public employes will be launched. It's expected to immediately enroll unions with memberships (in the public field) of over two million. The Fire Fighters expect some four million members of the new PED (Public Employes Dept. it will be called, since Dept of Public Employes would have acronymed into DOPE) in a short time.

Thus a new powerful coalition similar to Paul Hall's Maritime Trades Dept. or the Building and Construction Trades Dept. of the AFL- CIO is expected to roll into the nation's still sem- unionized cities, big and small.

They'll fight for the right of public employes everywhere, in every nook of government, to strike just as auto and steelworkers can. They'll fight for a new national collective bargaining law for public workers.

They'll coordinate strategy. If they try they'll be able to cripple a city, its school or sewage systems. Since a great many city, state and federal workers these days are increasingly black, Spanish-surnamed and other minority workers, there will be sociological as well as financial significance in and out of the labor movement.

It will not all be smooth. There are sharp differences between the militant, articulate Jerry Wurf and the comparative newcomer to the national scene, AFL- CIO vice president Al Shanker who leads the gargantuan 75,000-member teachers union here. But it appears inevitable that the new Public Employes Dept. juggernaut will roll through the nation's streets-- the new frontier.

Obviously the proletariat soon will have to understand what it means to meet a tax bill.

Charges of public intoxication and assault with a deadly weapon against Robert Lee Porter, Dunn Hotel, were continued to May 2.

The first parlors were built in monasteries — for conversation between the monks and members of the outside world. The word can be traced to the French and Middle English term "to speak."

Children 'learn by doing'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles written for The Week of the Young Child, which is being observed this week.)

Children learn and grow at an amazing rate. People, and many of the everyday objects children encounter in their early life, help children learn and, with a grown- up's help, the learning can become fun and challenging.

Children learn through playing, so today we are going to give mothers some ideas on how to make your child's toys and games more stimulating.

Remember, a few minutes of preplanning can lead to hours of fun and constructive play with or without mom being there. Also, it's not the completed project which is most important, but the process of learning through doing.

Children love to be praised for doing a good job and they like to see their works displayed. So help them grow and learn ... take a part in their activities.

Often parents are asked "What can I do?" when there is a toybox of goodies setting in the child's bedroom or playroom. The answer is generally "go play with your toys." Next time one of your youngsters asks that question, try this on him:

PLAY DOUGH

1 cup flour
½ cup salt
1 cup water
2 tbsp. oil
2 tsp. cream of tartar
food coloring

Mix ingredients together and cook for three minutes in nonstick pan. Turn out and cool and then knead for a few minutes. To store, put in air tight container.

FINGER PAINT

1 cup water
½ cup flour
food coloring

Mix water and flour with hands and add food coloring. One or two spoonfuls of soap flakes may be added.

Don't forget other such possibilities as oatmeal boxes, egg cartons, fabric scraps, yarn, plastic bottles (such as the ones liquid detergent comes from), shoe boxes, etc.

Your imagination can help build your child's imagination and teach him learning can be fun.

While we're at it, here's another possibility. Let your child help in the kitchen. Children often imitate their mother's cooking and washing dishes, but more often, they're interested in mixing ingredients. Let your child help with the mixing. Feeling is one way of learning, and they can also learn to distinguish different ingredients.

When making sandwiches, let children help spread the salads or take the wrappers off the bologna edges or cheeses. After cutting the sandwiches, let the children help arrange them, as well as pour the potato chips and help set the table.

Wanting to learn is what makes young children so enthusiastic. Help them become more enthusiastic and responsive by allowing them "adult jobs". Often stirring a cake or greasing a pizza pan can be a real treat to a child.

Always remember, too, that everyone learns best from first- hand experience, so be sure nutrition and good eating habits shouldn't be forgotten.

Flower care, arrangement discussed

Flower care and arrangement were discussed by Mrs. Ralph Carroll of Carroll's Florist at the April meeting of the Woman's Civic Club at the home of Mrs. Kermit Bird. Mrs. Carroll stressed that the new trend in flower arrangement is to follow personal tastes, rather than formal patterns, allowing each arranger's unique personality to be expressed.

Following Mrs. Carroll's talk, a dessert course was served by Mrs. Edgar Johnson, Mrs. Gene Potashnick, Mrs. Fae Brewer and Mrs. Myrtle Nunnelee.

Mrs. Roy Marks, president, conducted a brief business meeting and asked a spokesman for the executive committee to read a proposed amendment to the club's bylaws, regarding dues and membership regulations. Both sections of the amendment were voted on and accepted by the members present.

Mrs. James C. Adams and Mrs. Charles Goolsby were welcomed into the club as new members.

Mrs. W. G. Funk announced the memorial kitchen equipment for Wesley Methodist Church, honoring the late Mrs. Beatrice Dempster, had been presented.

Mrs. Gene Aufdenberg suggested the club purchase a new flag and flag holder for the Girl Scout troop it sponsors. The suggestion was approved.

The nominating committee submitted the following slate of officers and standing committee chairmen for the coming club year:

Mrs. Roy Marks, president; Mrs. Margaret Cain, vice president; Mrs. Tom Gleason, secretary; Mrs. Fae Brewer, treasurer; Mrs. Leon Garrett and Miss Almaretta Sidwell, special projects co- chairmen; Mrs. Mildred Canedy, program committee; Mrs. Robert Hope, hostess committee; Mrs. Ewart Taylor, attendance committee; Mrs. Harrison Tanner, membership committee; and Mrs. Carl Schorle, publicity committee.

The May meeting will feature a potluck dinner and card party May 7 at 12:30 p.m. in the Security Federal Savings and Loan Association community room.

Teacher concerned about young unwed girls who keep babies

Dear Ann Landers: I am a high school teacher who is deeply concerned bout the tendency of unmarrid teenage girls to keep their bbies. They are often unstable immature and irresponsible. The child becomes an unwated burden on "Grandma," who already has too much to d.

I tell these pegnant girls about the tbusands of childless couple who could give their baby aworld of love. I outline the advantages of growing up in a ome with two devoted parens. They snap back with, "I NEED to keep my baby because it's all I have," or, "What would people think of me if I gave away my own flesh and blood?"

My sister, who is a social worker, relates heartbreaking stories about unwed, teenage mothers who are prostitutes, on drugs-- their children being bounced off the walls by drunken or drug- crazed boyfriends. Some beat their babies because they resent changing diapers or caring for a sick child.

How did this insane trend get started? I pray to God something can be done to reverse it. --Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear H.: The "trend" got started by far- out movie stars and entertainers who were involved with married men or became intentionally pregnant for some neurotic reason and didn't want to get married.

I happen to know of an unmarried woman (NOT a teenager) who decided to keep her child and she did a beautiful job of raising it. But such women are few and far between. Most teenagers who become pregnant out of wedlock would do well to heed your counsel.

Dear Ann Landers: When I saw the letter titled 'How To Be a Successful Mother- in-Law," I nearly lost my breakfast. (I read you in the morning paper.) 'One eye closed and one mouth shut," eh? The way I figue it she's a hypocrite.

If the dame noticed with one eye shut that her daughter-in- law hasn't had the living room slip- covers cleaned in three years, what do you think she'd have seen if she opened BOTH eyes? A housekeeper who would leave a filthy dishrag in the corner of a sink as its permanent resting place would give me heartburn.

Sorry, but I couldn't be so phony. I'd have to tell my daughter- in- law what I thought. I'm sure she'd admire my honesty.- For The Truth

Dear Truth: I'm not so sure she'd admire your honesty. Chances are she'd consider her soiled slip- covers and dirty dishrag none of your business.

I'd say one cosed eye and a closed mouth is not too big a price to pay for a good relationship with a daughter-in- law. Sorry about your heartburn.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been married three years. My husband is very handsome. When women keep bringing it up I get uncomfortable.

My parents live 900 miles away. They are not well enough to travel and I want to go visit them.

My husband likes them but they can't speak much English and I know he wouldn't enjoy going with me. Frankly, I'm afraid to leave him home because I've heard that men whose wives take vacations without them play around. Somehow they feel justified.

Tell me what to do. I'd die if anything happened to my marriage.-- Unsure In Long Island

Dear Un: A husband who is inclined to fool around will do so whether his wife is in town or out of town. Go visit your ailing parents and have a good time.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50c in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Dr. Hursh not convinced diet can affect heart attacks

By DR. LAURENCE M. HURSH
National Dairy Council Consultant

One of my pet peeves, admittedly, is the commercial effort in this country to scare people about heart disease. I just don't think people have to switch from saturated fats to polyunsaturated fats for fear of a heart attack.

There is no conclusive research evidence to show that people who maintain a decent weight and eat a reasonably balanced diet-- regardless of which fats they eat-- are going to have heart disease. All of the talk is based on studies and statistics that, to my mind, do not sufficiently rule out other factors enough to say "diet is what did it."

There are hunches galore. But if anybody knew anything solid, the National Heart and Lung Institute would not now be launching a screening of some 400,000 people to choose 12,000 for a five- year study to find out whether the incidence of heart disease can be lowered by efforts such as controlling the diet.

The trouble with that study, of course, is that even it will not surely settle the cholesterol controversy. Why? Because they are not planning the study in a way to isolate that one factor for measurement. Instead, they are going to work with 12,000 people in an effort to control several risk factors at once, like smoking, blood pressure, weight, and finally, diet.

So, if they are successful in statistically lowering heart disease among these folks, then we will know if you do all those things you might be better off. You won't know for sure that it will help you. But statistically, it will at least move you into a group that is expected to have less heart disease. Small pleasure if you still get a heart attack after all that.

Meantime, certain vegetable oil and "soft" margarine manufacturers ladle the airwaves and television with implorings that we should all switch to their products.

But here's my real message for today: You needn't switch to lower your blood cholesterol. There is right now, with no waiting, evidence from a Massachusetts Institute of Technology study that mere reduction of weight in obese individuals brought about a lowering of blood fat levels equal to or in excess of results obtained through diet changes or the use of drugs. Studies with patients under carefully controlled hospital conditions were carried out, each at least six months long, by Dr. Robert S. Lees.

Maintain Desirable Weight

His findings remind us again of the advisability of maintaining desirable body weight through sound nutritional habits. And doing that does not require you to go off on radical changes in your eathing habits. Just eat good meals and control your total caloric intake each day.

I'm not subscribing to the cholesterol- scare theory. I'm simply saying you'll feel better and if you don't want to worry about cholesterol, you can control its level in the simple way that Dr. Lees' research suggests. No fuss. No bother.

Henry hits 714th

CINCINNATI (AP) — "I've always thought that time was on my side," Hank Aaron said Thursday after the 40-year-old slugger unleashed a dramatic home run to tie Babe Ruth's all-time record of 714.

The Atlanta superstar's timeless chase of the legendary Ruth ended abruptly — on his first swing of the 1974 season when Aaron drilled a Jack Billingham fast ball over the left field fence in Riverfront Stadium.

"I still feel like I do owe fans in Atlanta a shot at 715," Aaron said, "but, yes, I am going to play Saturday.

"I'm certainly going to play the game the way it's supposed to be played and if I get a pitch to hit, I'll try to dispose of it."

The Braves had wanted to withhold Aaron from the three-game opening series in Cincinnati that continues Saturday and Sunday following an open date today. The club announced its intention, triggering controversy.

Bowie Kuhn, commissioner of baseball, said he expected the Braves to use Aaron as they had a year ago, playing roughly two of every three games.

The soft-spoken superstar wasn't placed in the line-up for certain until shortly before gametime and he responded with what the standing room only crowd of 52,154 had come to see.

The homer, a three-run blast, sailed over the 375-foot mark and came on a 3-1 count from the Cincinnati right-hander. Aaron had taken the only other strike, a letter-high fast ball.

"It was a good pitch," Aaron said. "I was guessing fast ball. He got it up a little."

Billingham said the pitch sailed on him, that it was a mistake and "he hits mistakes."

"He deserves it," Billingham said. "He's the greatest I've ever seen. It's unfortunate he hit it against me."

Billingham and Aaron met in the small room beneath the stadium where both faced interviews from a battery of newsmen. As the two passed each other, Billingham patted Aaron on the back and said softly, "Congratulations, but why did you have to do it on me."

Aaron merely chuckled.

The game was interrupted for six minutes as Vice President Gerald R. Ford, in town to toss out the first ball of the season, and Kuhn strolled onto the field to congratulate Aaron.

"This is a great day for you and a great day for baseball," Ford told Aaron. "Good luck for 715 and a good many more."

Kuhn praised Aaron as "not only one of the greatest professionals to play the game, but a great gentleman as well."

Aaron broke away from the swarm of teammates that greeted him at home plate and jogged to a box adjacent to the team's dugout where he kissed his wife, Billye, who had tears streaming down her cheeks.

It was his 96th home run against Cincinnati, including 54 in this city where professional baseball began in 1869.

Aaron said his initial excitement was dulled when the Braves blew a lead and lost 7-6 in 11 innings.

NEW YORK (AP) — The often maligned timber wolf will be reestablished in the Huron Mountain area of northern Michigan if a conservationist project works out.

Experimenters are trapping a pack of five wolves in northern Minnesota, the one area south of the Canadian border with a comparatively healthy wolf population. After getting medical checks, rabies and distemper shots and after being fitted with radio transmitters so that their movements can be followed easily, the wolves will be released.

Thornton also stated that Jehovah's witnesses conduct home Bible studies with members of the public, and apparently quite a few of these came to make the total of 1,602 persons attending.

He also commented, "We plan to use the information received at this assembly not only in our personal lives, but also in our public house- to- house ministry, encouraging others to do more Bible research at home."

The Poplar Bluff gathering was a prelude to a much larger convention the Witnesses are to have in Little Rock, Arl,, June 27-30, 1974, when several thousand are expected to attend.

The gathering is one of 61 the Witnesses will hold in the United States this summer.

THE BIBLE

129. Samuel Warns the People

After Samuel had installed Saul as king, he gathered the people together and addressed them. He exhorted the people to tell him if he had ever cheated or defrauded them in any way, and they were forced to reply that he had not.

Then Samuel pointed out their sins, and called for rain and thunder during the wheat harvest (the driest season of the year) to prove that their asking for a king was evil in the eyes of the Lord. When the rain and thunder came, the people were greatly afraid and begged Samuel to pray for them because they had added to their other sins by asking for a king.

But Samuel delivered a stern warning to them: "...Fear not: ye have done all this wickedness; yet turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart; ...Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart: for consider how great things he hath done for you. But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king." (I Samuel 12:20-25 and turn any boat into a bass rig. Makes it easier to cast, control electric motor, steer.

here's the biggest fishing tackle news of the year . . . the brand-new Garcia Ambassadeur 5000D. The "D" stands for direct drive, and that's just what this exciting new reel has. But it also has much more. Unlike the direct-drive reels of years ago, the 5000D combines the power of its direct retrieve with the advantages of a smooth, adjustable drag and the casting ease of a free spool.

This is the reel that black bass fishermen all over the country have been asking us for. They want a reel to fish the heavy cover that bass inhabit. They know that the big ones are often found under or around lily pads, lurking near stumps and underwater brush, or in the shadows of undercut banks. They know that when a 'hawg' bass hits under these conditions, they have to pull him away from obstructions fast if they're going to get him. They use heavy line and plenty of muscle.

This is the kind of fishing for which the 5000D was designed. Since pinpoint casting is important for bass hunting, the 5000D has the famous Ambassadeur anti-backlash centrifugal brake (upper left) and spool tension control with reminder setting, plus a convenient free spool that disengages everything but the level wind. And the fully adjustable knurled drag (lower left) works only when you want it to . . . when your hand is off the grips. When you retrieve with the 5000D, you're back in direct drive, ready to sock it to that big one before he can head into the brush. The 5000D. The lunker-stopper that teaches the bass who's boss.

BESS MYERSON — RECALLS SOUND ADVICE

Bess Myerson has long been an unusual woman, and in a variety of achievements -- as a talented Miss America winner, concert pianist, television and radio commentator, newspaper columnist, magazine editor, community leader and champion of consumer rights.

That makes her a perspicacious choice to host "Women of the Year, 1974," the second annual awards ceremony honoring eight outstanding women in different careers. The special will be broadcast live from Avery Fisher Hall at New York's Lincoln Center on Monday, April 8 (9:00-10:00 PM., CDS) on the CBS Television Network.

The Women of the Year being honored were among those nominated by the readers of Ladies' Home Journal and finally selected by a panel of 16 distinguished women leaders. The program will also feature entertainment and filmed interviews.

"I'm pleased to be part of the awards program," Miss Myerson said. "It's really special, with an important purpose, which it serves well -- and does it entertainingly. I think it will appeal to a wide audience, both women and men. There should never be any 'communication gap' when exceptional achievements are being celebrated, especially achievements that benefit everyone. These eight women have earned everyone's attention -- and may their tribe increase."

"I don't think any of the eight women we're honoring know my mother," Miss Myerson said, "but they've learned the same lesson my mother taught her three daughters: set a worthy goal; work hard, without despair, to achieve it; don't accept other people's definitions of what you place in life must be; and make the effort itself as worthy as the goal.

Anne Murray is in the process of changing her image from the girl next door and singer of country and middle of the road songs to something a little more hip. She'd like to play to the kind of college audiences that Kris Kristofferson does and sing that kind of modern country, with freedom to mix in other styles.

Two years with Glen Campbell on TV, some duo personal appearances and a duet album with him gave her the image most listeners have of the Canadian singer. "Last summer Glen asked me to go out on the road with him. I explained I can only ride on his coattails so long. I got to do my own thing.

"I have my own band. We've got to go out and do it, got to play clubs that are semihip, colleges and small halls that seat no more than 3,000 so you can put in a good sound system and people get their money's worth. I played Greensboro, N.C., in a place that seated 17,000. They told me it would be 6,000. Only 1,700 showed up. I found out later that right next door there was a 2,500-seat auditorium, which would have been perfect. That's the kind of thing you go through.

"The guys in the band have stuck with me three years. The money hasn't been great. There are seven guys. They have faith that one day it is really going to happen, if we continue not to compromise ourselves. Even if it doesn't, we're having a good time now, living day by day and thanking God for our blessings."

Miss Murray has one gold single, "Snowbird." "Danny's Song, the single, sold 850,000. "The important thing is to get in the top 10, which that was. It's not important to have a gold record. I don't need any more gold; I've got one. Some people want to line their walls with them. Who needs that?"

There was talk when "Snowbird" came out that it was a drug song. "There's some truth to me being the girl next door; with the image I'm trying to portray, maybe I should say that it is. But I know it is not a drug song. Gene MacLellan was walking along a beach on Prince Edward Island in late fall, almost into winter. He saw snowbirds — snow buntings — round, white birds — on the beach. It conjured up a whole image to him. Gene had been in love a few times and thrown over. That is what the song is all about."

Ocean had a hit with MacLellan's "Put Your Hand in the Hand." "I was the first to record it. It was supposed to be my followup to 'Snowbird.' But the powers that be in New York didn't think it sounded like 'Snowbird' and didn't think it sounded like me. They had no idea what I sounded like. We wanted it to be the next single. They didn't. Another mistake."

Miss Murray was born in Spring Hill, Nova Scotia. After college, she taught physical education for one year on Prince Edward Island. "The summer of 1966 I auditioned for a TV show out of Halifax, a network show, a summer replacement. I had to make some money to buy a car for the first year teaching. I sang mainly in a chorus. It started in the late 1950s as a sing-along show. By the time I got to it, it was into the folk rock thing, country too, variety with group singing. I got to do one solo and one duet. They were calling me to come over to Halifax and do TV shows.

The second year I had to make a decision as to whether to go back to teaching or give show business a try. They had a TV show I could do all year. Show business seemed very insecure; teaching, you get your check every two weeks. I decided to do it — to give myself a year. I got a little bored that year; the show was just horrible. The next summer I did the replacement show again. The next fall I decided I was going to get out and learn something about clubs and concerts on the east coast of Canada. I got packed houses; people knew I was a Maritimer. I recorded an album on a budget Canadian label in 1968. It sold pretty well in the Maritime provinces.

"He told me to remember I was the best singer in the world and he was the best producer, so we weren't going to be taken advantage of. They all said the same thing. They'd give us $3,000 and have complete charge of production. We walked into Capitol and by this time we were really getting heavy. We almost believed we were as good as we said. Paul White there told us, anything we want.

"We did the 'Snowbird' album. It cost $18,000. When they saw the bill they weren't happy but within eight months they were very happy." All six of Miss Murray's albums are on Capitol. Her seventh, "Love Song," will come out this month.

DOC SEVERINSEN
Music Director, 'The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson' Mondays-Fridays, NBC Television Network (In Color, 10:30 p.m.- 12:00 Midnight

Doc Severinsen has become one of the popular music world's best- known trumpet soloists and conductors. In a lighter vein, he's also recognized as television's "man of wild, mod attire." As far as Doc is concerned, his fame is the result of being music director of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Don's musical activities now extend far beyond his nightly musical chores on NBC- TV. He has hosted "The Midnight Special" and starred in the Peabody Award-winning special, "The Timex All- Star Swing Festival," both on NBC- TV.

Severinsen, who is as familiar with the classics as he is with works of contemporary composers, has been music director of the "Tonight Show" since Oct. 9, 1967. He joined that program when it started on NBC- TV Oct. 1, 1962. His awards are numerous, including repeat honors in the trumpet and conductor categories of Playboy's All- Star Jazz and Pop Polls.

He was born July 7, 1927, in Arlington, Ore. Although he was christened Carl, he soon became known as "Little Doc" because his father, the town dentist, was called "Big Doc." Severinsen recalled: "My father was an excellent violinist and he wanted me to learn to play that instrument. I didn't want to. I wanted to play the trombone." He persisted and when the elder Severinsen yielded, Doc received a trumpet because that was the only horn available at the local music store.

His dad gave him lessons and three weeks after he started practicing, Doc was playing in the high school band. When he was 12, he won the state band contest and the Music Educators' national competition. Even before finishing high school, he went on the road with Ted Fiorito's band. He returned to Arlington long enough to graduate. Another trip on the road was interrupted by a year's service in the Army.

Following his discharge, Doc toured with bands led by Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Charlie Barnett and Ted Fiorito. In 1949, when he was 22, Doc joined NBC as a staff musician, playing for such performers as Dinah Shore, Kate Smith, Eddie Fisher and Steve Allen.

Severinsen continues to practice at least two hours a day and when time allows, raises quarter horses, both for breeding and racing purposes.

He is married to a high school classmate, the former Evonne Evans, who shares his life- long love of horses. The Severinsens have five children.

E. Prairie man whips girl, 4, draws 90 days

CHARLESTON — Tommy Hamblin of East Prairie was sentenced to 90 days in the Mississippi County jail Thursday by Magistrate T. J. Brown Jr. after he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of mistreatment of a child.

The offense occurred on or about March 29, and the child involved Hamblin's 4-year old stepdaughter Tina Farrell, whom he is charged with whipping with a belt or strap, leaving bruises on her buttocks and back. An investigation is being conducted by the Mississippi County Welfare Department.

In a trial by court, Michael Gunther of Sikeston was found guilty of driving while intoxicated and was fined $126.30. Witnesses in the case were Cpl. Ronald Roach, a Cairo, Ill., policeman, and Trooper Ronald Ryan of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

According to Roach's testimony, he observed a car, driven by Gunther, speeding through Cairo Feb. 11. He said he turned on his red light and siren and proceeded to follow the car across the bridge into Missouri after using his radio to call for assistance from the Missouri State Highway Patrol

Gunther stopped his car across the bridge on the Missouri side of the river and Roach said he informed Gunther he was under arrest for speeding.

Ryan testified he arrived at the scene about 1:45 a.m. Feb. 11 and that Gunther and two passengers in the car were taken to the Charleston police department where he gave Gunther a breathalyzer test and placed him under arrest for driving while intoxicated.

A defense motion that the charge be dismissed on the grounds that the arrest was invalid since the offense was not committed in the presence of Ryan, was overruled by Judge Brown.

Lee Childress of Diehlstadt was bound over to Circuit Court after he waived a preliminary hearing on a charge of tampering with a motor vehicle. Childress, who remains in custody under $1,000 bond, is charged with driving off in a truck owned by Gus Heckman on March 14 without permission.

Roger Mannon of East Prairie pleaded not guilty to a charge of rape and a preliminary hearing, requested by the defendant, was set for April 11.

The alleged rape, which involves an East Prairie girl under the age of 16, reportedly occurred Feb. 4 in East Prairie. Mannon remains in custody under $5,000 bond.

Fantina Backus was given a suspended 10-day jail sentence and placed on one-year probation on a disturbing the peace charge. Conditions of the probation include obeying the law and staying away from the Fred Penn home.

An attorney was appointed to defend Arnold Lee Mims of Charleston against a charge of burglary, involving breaking and entering. He is accused of breaking a side window at Economy Furniture Store in Charleston March 27 with felonious intent to burglarize and steal.

James "Johnny" Campbell pleaded not guilty to a common assault charge and trial was set for April 18. He was released on his own recognizance.

William Joseph Walls and Brenda Reynolds each paid a $16 fine on a charge of violating the wildlife code by fishing without a permit. Linda Ann Moore of East Prairie paid a $21 fine for improper registration, and Nolen Grigsby of Charleston paid a $41 fine on charges of careless and imprudent driving and driving with an expired operator's license.

ERA dead this year

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The controversial Equal Rights Amendment, subject of thousands of letters to Missouri legislators, will not come to a vote again this year as the result of Senate action Thursday.

The Senate voted to stop printing its perfection, or firstround approval, calendar, because the end of the 1974 session is only three weeks away. There are several hundred House-approved bills and Senate bills given first-round approval that must be dealt with.

The Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), which failed in the Missouri legislature last year, was 17th from the top of the first-round approval calendar, which contained about 70 bills. The Senate worked all morning on the calendar, which contained about 70 bills before adjouring for the weekend.

The sponsor, Sen. Raymond Howard, could have and still can, take the bill up out of order if he can get 23 votes from the 34 senators.

"I can't get 23 votes," he said.

Howard attempted to put it on a separate calendar Thursday but withdrew the motion, preventing a roll call vote by only about a dozen senators. Most had left the Senate chamber.

"I'll introduce it again next year and I think it'll pass," Howard said. The states have five more years in which to ratify the era. Thirty-three of the necessary 38 states have ratified it.

Minds could change and there may be some new faces because of the 1974 elections, he noted.

After several senators mentioned on the floor that Howard could have tried early to get consideration of the ERA out of order, Howard said, "I didn't have 23 votes then and I don't now. It wouldn't have made any difference."

Two months ago, Howard charged that the majority floor leader, Sen. Lawrence J. Lee, D-St. Louis, hurt the ERA's chances because he delayed reporting the jesolution out of committee, letting 25 bills get ahead of it on the calendar. Lee opposed the resolution in committee.

Most of the legislative leaders have endorsed ERA.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who supports the ERA, commented, "It shows a desire to avoid a vote on the issue, which is not a very courageous way out."

Bond also said he was concerned about the Senate's preliminary approval of a bill to raise legislators' salaries from $8,400 to $10,800 a year, saying the legislature should turn its attention to more important problems.

The pay raise bill was on a list of bills put out by Bond's office for Republican House members, urging them to vote no.

The Senate gave preliminary approval to a bill putting operation of the state license fee offices in the hands of local government officials.

It allows cities and counties to raise the fee for each license transaction from 40 to 50 cents, and allows the Revenue Department to set up new Revenue Department branch offices.

The Revenue Department has asked for money to add 125 new employes and add 11 new branch offices, giving the department 22.

Jobless rate dips

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment dipped slightly from 5.2 per cent to 5.1 per cent of the work force in March, the government said today. It was the first decline in five months and raised hopes that the rise in joblessness that began with the Arab oil embargo may have topped out.

The Labor Department considered the drop of one-tenth of one per cent statistically insignificant but government analysts said the figures did suggest stability in the job picture.

The nation's unemployment rate jumped from a 3½-year low of 4.6 per cent in October to 5.2 per cent in January as the impact of the fuel shortage spread through the economy. It held steady in February at 5.2 per cent.

The Nixon administration had forecast a sharp rise in unemployment in the first half of the year but with joblessness averaging about 5.5 per cent over the full year. Some private economists had predicted the rate would top six per cent.

According to today's report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, total employment remained essentially unchanged for the second consecutive month at 85.9 million in March while the number of people not at work edged down from 4.7 million in February to a seasonally adjusted 4.6 million.

Since October about 530,000 persons had been reported thrown out of work mostly as a result of the direct or indirect effects of the energy crisis.

The government said that although white-collar employment has continued to expand at a strong pace, rising by more than 800,000 over the October-March period, the gross was largely offset by a decline in blue-collar jobs, mainly due to layoffs in the auto industry.

Unemployment rates for most groupings in the labor force were mostly unchanged last month. The jobless rate for married men was 2.4 per cent; adult women 5 per cent; teenagers 15 per cent; white workers 4.6 per cents, and blacks 9.4 per cent.

Jobs in other goods-producing industries — construction and mining — declined by 40,000 over the month but in the service-producing industries employment remained unchanged last month following an unusually sharp gain of 240,000 in February.

Hearing set for knifing suspect

BLOOMFIELD— A preliminary hearing for Johnny Gene Rodgers of Dexter was set for April 11 after a Magistrate Court appearance before Judge Koss W. Blomeyer on a felonious assault charge.

Rodgers is being held in the Stoddard County jail under $2,000 bond in connection with the early Sunday morning wounding of his brother Danny Rodgers of Dexter Star Route who was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital in serious condition from a knife wound that punctured a lung.

Bond was set at $2,500 and a preliminary hearing was set on April 11 for Herman Ray Dunn of Malden on a charge of burglary and stealing. Dunn, along with Dwight Butler, Leonard Little and Jerry Lee Cluck, are accused of burglarizing Shipman's Rebel Market and Southeast Cooperative Service Co. in Dexter.

Marvin Howard Scott pleaded guilty to two charges of driving while intoxicated and was fined $100 on each charge and assessed a 60-day suspended jail sentence on the second count.

Ronald L. Franklin of Puxico, charged with careless and imprudent driving and driving while his license is revoked, entered a plea of not guilty and trial was set for April 25.

Kenneth Allen Juno of Beloit, Wis., was fined $100 and ordered to surrender his operator's license on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Fines were imposed for speeding against Patsy Ann Hobbs of Malden, $14, Harold Robert Rush Jr. of Wappapello, $19, Terry Calvin Bauman of Campbell, $20, Lloyd Everett Hitt of Advance, $10, and Anthony C. Bell of Dexter, $15.

Fined for careless and imprudent driving were Beverly Ann Ritch of Gray Ridge, $10, and James Leroy Depro Jr. of Dexter, $25.

Fined for driving without a license were Kenneth Lee Sterling of Broseley, $25, and Donald Ray Seamour, $10.

Arrests lead to recovery of tools

Floyd Porter III and his common law wife Imogene Barrick of 1013 Applegate are being held in the Sikeston city jail after being arrested Wednesday night in connection with a tool theft charge that turned up over $10,000 worth of tools which were confiscated in a search from his home and are believed to have been taken in a recent series of tool thefts, Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman said today.

Approximately $500 worth of tools, apparently stolen Wednesday night from three trucks parked at Ramada Inn on Highway 62 East, were found in Porter's car when he was stopped by highway patrolman Ronald Ryan.

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Bud Jones was called to the scene and arrested Porter and Miss Barrick for investigation of stealing.

On Thursday, Inman and Sikeston police detectives Dan Hinton and Sgt. Jack Patterson obtained permission from Porter to search his home where they discovered the large collection of tools. Inman

BRING ON THE COAL

A recent newspaper ad by a group of power companies advises this: "America has more coal than the Middle East has oil. Let's dig it!"

We say, Amen.

The United States, as the phase goes, is the Saudie Arabia of the coal world. We have enough of the fossil fuel to last for at least 500 years. And, since we already use about 35 per cent of the world's energy, we're going to need it.

Even with the lifting of the Arab oil embargo, it will be many years before the U. S. could become self-sufficient in oil, given the best of possible circumstances. In the meantime, we face the uneasy choice of compromising the ideal environment we want to have and the power from coal that we must have. While other forms of energy such as nuclear power are necessary, clearly it will be a good while yet before they can supply a large percentage of U. S. energy needs.

In response to a national need for wider use of coal, the Nixon administration is now mobilizing a task force to work out details of expansion. "We've got to develop coal from its present 17.7 per cent of the national energy base" to the 45 per cent figure of "10 or 15 years ago," said Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton in discussing the task force.

Morton added that various Federal agencies dealing with energy will be represented in the task force and that the group will work with industry and labor leaders to prod them into greater use of coal.

We believe this development is constructive and necessary and we commend the Nixon administration for these tentative steps to move the nation closer to independence in energy.

MAYBE NOTHING
IS WRONG

While economists, politicians and anticapitalistic theorists debate the pros and cons of the free market system and such things as the cost of promotion and advertising to consumers, the system continues to function with amazing efficiency -- and continues to add zest and variety to the business of living. For some consumers, it holds surprises as well.

A news dispatch datelined Los Angeles tells of one of these surprises. It tells how a Los Angeles couple, newly wed and just starting housekeeping, won one million trading stamps on a television quiz program. When the happy couple figured up the value of the over 833 trading stamp books they received, they found they had enough stamps for $2,500 worth of merchandise. Winning such a prize, they said, "... couldn't have happened at a better time. Like most young married couples it seems like there are hundreds of things we need for the house ..." This couple went on a shopping spree. Their purchases with the trading stamps included two color television sets, bookshelves, a reclining chair, bedroom furniture, a radio, glassware, cookware, silverware, bathroom scales, a toaster, an ice crusher, an electric can opener, candlesticks, bedspreads, sheets and end tables.

This list of items speaks volumes for our economic system. In many lands, such luxuries simply are not available at any price, even if a young couple could afford them. In many cases, they would be hard put to obtain the bare necessities of housekeeping, let along the good things of life which the Los Angeles couple probably took for granted. One can only ask what is wrong with a system that produces so many things that make life a little easier and that so many people want? Maybe nothing is wrong -- it is something to think about.

SPACE DROPS KEEP
HEADS

Since Sputnik I opened the door to space exploration in 1957, men have placed more than 6,800 objects in earth orbit.

Of these, 3,891 had "decayed"— fallen from orbit— as of mid- October, reports the North American Defense Command's (NORAD) Space Defense Center in Colorado Srpings. They're coming down at the rate of about one a day."

Fortunately, most of them are burned up by atmospheric friction. Of those that do survive re- entry, the majority land in the oceans and seas which cover three- fourths of the earth's surface.

The chances of any object from space— a nose cone, spent rocket body or other miscellaneous junk— actually hitting someone are "very slight— about a billion- to- one shot," says the Center.

As far as is known, space-age debris claimed its first and only victim nearly 13 years ago when a 40- pound chunk of white- hot metal from a U. S. probe slammed to earth near a sleepy Cuban village and snuffed out the life of an inoffensively grazing cow.

But with sturdier materials and the increasing frequency of space launches, more fragments are expected to impact on land. Thus the Space Defense Center, using a world- wide network of radar and optical sensors, some of which can photograph an object the size of a basketball at 20,000 miles, conducts a 24- hour surveillance and computer analysis on decaying space objects.

It predicts the "geographic area envelope" of earth impact and issues warnings of potential re- entry object damage in much the same way as the weather bureau issues hazardous storm warnings— whatever good it does— for people, or cows.

We don't need to worry about some of the objects. For example, Explorer I, launched in December, 1962, is expected to stay up until the year 4207. Telstar I, in space since 1961, will oribt for 56 centuries, or until 7561.

PASSING THE TORCH

The space program has brought immeasurable benefits back to Earth. These have shown up in terms of better materials and design of consumer products, in new techniques and tools in medicine and surgery, in improved management procedures and quality control.

The chief executive of one of the nation's leading aerospace firms, the company chosen to build the space shuttle, has described the profession of engineering as "... a bridge for putting to use, for the benefit of all mankind, the total knowledge of the world." His company has been a leader in bringing the benefits of space technology back to Earth. But if the technology necessary to maintain the security of the nation, solve our social and environmental problems and move to build a better life for people everywhere is to be developed, it must be carried forward in the next generation by the young people who are choosing their careers in high schools and colleges today. The industry leader describes the work which his company is doing with public school systems, with student groups at the college level and with universities and technical schools to broaden "... student awareness and understanding of the importance of technology in our society." In new courses of training, emphasis is being placed on linking technological and social problems in the students' minds.

It is this kind of creative thinking and work by leaders in the aerospace industry which will help assure our national security and in the long run build dedication and price of achievement in young minds now developing. It is the next generation that must in its turn create the technology and gain the realistic understanding of social and political problems required to move ahead toward a better life for all people.

REALLY COMING

Across the nation, the flexibility and responsiveness of private enterprise in meeting the broadening needs and expectations of the buying public are being demonstrated on a massive scale. One of the most significant new developments is found in the formation of the Committee for Constructive Consumerism, organized as an arm of the Council of Better Business Bureaus. Serving on the Committee are the chief executive officers of a blue-ribbon list of some of the largest, oldest and most respected corporate enterprises in the nation, including such companies as Ford Motor Company, Coca Cola, J. C. Penney, Eli Lilly, General Electric General Mills and others.

Henry Ford II, speaking as chairman of the Committee for Constructive Consumerism, has said, "If the consumer has trouble in the marketplace, the problem begins with business and business can best solve it. We understand the dissatisfaction of many consumers and will make every effort to turn this situation around. The ultimate solution to the consumer's problems can be achieved only through open dialogue in an atmosphere of mutual trust and not through adversary action. We are dedicated to promoting that kind of dialogue." It is the purpose of the Committee to devise policies and take action to improve business performance in the marketplace and restore the confidence of consumers in American business.

This is an unprecedented collective effort by U. S. business firms to earn greater customer satisfaction for their products and services. It is designed to get consumerism back in the hands of business and out of the hands of extreme consumerists. It demonstrates a deep concern and an awareness on the part of corporate America that it must meet or exceed he expectations of the people of the U. S. by voluntary means if the nation is to avoid the trap of overly- restrictive consumerist legislation. Such restriction and conformity could destroy the ability of business enterprise to produce the variety and quality of goods and services desired by the American people. This would be a tragedy for all concerned.

With the kind of ground-swell response that is now building behind the private enterprise drive to meet the broadening needs of its customers, the chance of losing the ball game to the destructive and restrictive elements of the consumerist movement is lessened. U. S. business has never yet failed to produce what the people of the United States really wanted, and there is no reason to believe that it will fail to do so in this most crucial time.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol made a total of 150,430 arrests in 1973. This number was an increase of nearly one per cent over the number of arrests made by the Highway Patrol in 1972. Slightly more than 95 per cent of these arrests were classified as "traffic" or motor vehicle associated arrests. The remaining arrests were in the criminal misdemeanor and felony category.

There were 143,740 motor vehicle arrests made by the Patrol last year of which 75,232 were for hazardous moving violations. Among the offenses included in this category are those relating to driving while intoxicated.

The number of driving while intoxicated arrests classified as motor vehicle misdemeanors totaled 5,077 during 1973. There were also 136 driving while intoxicated felony arrests made by the Patrol. Under the Missouri Statutes the first two convictions for driving while intoxicated are misdemeanors, but the third are subsequent offenses are felonies.

The Highway Patrol's Commercial Motor Vehicle Division weighed 1,788,799 trucks last year. The division made 42,645 arrests and issued 130,311 warnings.

In addition to the arrests made by the Highway Patrol last year, the officers issued a total of 493,933 warnings to persons for minor infrations of the law.

Senator William J. Cason, D-Clinton, President Pro Tem of the Missouri Senate, appointed today a special bipartisan committee to recommend a code of ethics for Missouri Senators.

"It now appears," Cason said, "that in this short session we may not have an opportunity to pass on a bill setting forth ethics for all elected officials.

"Therefore, I am setting up a special committee of four members to presently answer questions of Senators concerning ethics and to recommend a code of ethics for Senators which we can incorporate in our rules next year. It is also fair and proper that before we impose a code of conduct and ethics on other elected officals we should impose one on ourselves first.

"This is the same pattern we followed in opening up Senate committee meetings to the public and the press before the Sunshine or open meetings bill was passed. It has worked very well and I am hopeful that we can do the same with a senatorial code of ethics."

Appointed to the committee were Senator William B. Waters, D-Liberty, chairman; Senator Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, the senior member of the Senate; Senator Richard M. Webster, R-Carthage, the minority caucus chairman, and Senator Paul L. Bradshaw, R-Springfield.

The committee would study the problem of ethical behavior for Senators in order to prevent conflicts of interest or appearance of impropriety, as well as rules of behavior within the Senate chamber while the Senate is in session.

Its recommendations would be made in time for them to be debated and incorporated in the 1975 Senate rules.

New Labor Frontier:

Union Chiefs Creating New 'Department' To Organize Millions of Public Employes Everywhere

NEW YORK-- If what's left of Union Square radicals here would, as once they did lustily, sing, "Arise ye prisoners of starvation," the haggard ranks of the oppressed would be thin indeed. This springs to mind with an analysis of the startling Transport Workers Union contract victory the other night which forced the Metropolitan Transportation Authority to begin paying subway toilet and window washers over $13,000 annually in "base pay."

This is exclusive of overtime (plenty) and coming cost of- living increases. Thus the lowest- skilled proletarian mopping up the underground will be paid in the next two years what motormen were getting in the recently expired contract. The subway engineers now will be receiving $15,000 annual base pay.

So it is being assumed that, when the new contract expires in two years, transit porters will move up and be paid $15,000 a year, plus. . .

Such victories, of course, come out of moneys from eventually rocketing fares, the industrial power to paralyze a city which such a well-organized union has, and from political clout.

This is the new frontier. It's what the in- house specialists call "the public sector"-- men and women working for the city, state and federal governments. It's the swiftest growing front. Ranging from teachers to "revenuers" to fire fighters to transit ticket-takers, from streetcleaners to sophisticated highly skilled scientists, the total comes to 14 million employes.

Fastest growing of unions in this field is Jerry Wurf's 650,000 American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. Biggest most self- "militant- izing" non- AFL-CIO force is the 1.4 million-member National Education Assn. (teachers) now striking or having just struck some of the nation's major cities.

Some time ago it occurred to "Howie" McClennan, International Fire Fighters Assn. (AFL- CIO) president, that all the unions in the field should be wrapped up in one mighty department of the massive labor federation. Then they could try to organize the seven to eleven million non-union public sector (government) workers.

For example, the federal government employs some 10,000 fire fighters. Only a few are unionized.

McClennan believes that one single public sector department could coordinate vast collective bargaining-- and so set a common policy on strikes during which some of the citizenry might die if, say, fire fighters or police take job action. Of which there have been some. Or during some long sanitation strike which literally puts a plague on all houses.

So the national fire fighters union official sponsored creation of a vast public sector organization.

McClennan, who once attended a White House banquet in a red shirt, conferred with labor's chief of chiefs, George Meany. The latter was "enthusiastic." So it went before the last national AFL- CIO convention.

And at the coming AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting on May 9, the odds are that a new department of public employes will be launched. It's expected to immediately enroll unions with memberships (in the public field) of over two million. The Fire Fighters expect some four million members of the new PED (Public Employes Dept. it will be called, since Dept of Public Employes would have acronymed into DOPE) in a short time.

Thus a new powerful coalition similar to Paul Hall's Maritime Trades Dept. or the Building and Construction Trades Dept. of the AFL- CIO is expected to roll into the nation's still sem- unionized cities, big and small.

They'll fight for the right of public employes everywhere, in every nook of government, to strike just as auto and steelworkers can. They'll fight for a new national collective bargaining law for public workers.

They'll coordinate strategy. If they try they'll be able to cripple a city, its school or sewage systems. Since a great many city, state and federal workers these days are increasingly black, Spanish-surnamed and other minority workers, there will be sociological as well as financial significance in and out of the labor movement.

It will not all be smooth. There are sharp differences between the militant, articulate Jerry Wurf and the comparative newcomer to the national scene, AFL- CIO vice president Al Shanker who leads the gargantuan 75,000-member teachers union here. But it appears inevitable that the new Public Employes Dept. juggernaut will roll through the nation's streets-- the new frontier.

Obviously the proletariat soon will have to understand what it means to meet a tax bill.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Nixon's Home Improvements

WASHINGTON-- President Nixon finally may have to answer for all the money the taxpayers have squandered on his seashore estates in California and Florida.

His tax returns have been investigated by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, whose staff has concluded that some of the home improvements were intended solely for his personal benefit and, therefore, should have been declared as extra, taxable income.

This may violate the Constitution, which states the President shall receive compensation for his services but "he shall not receive within that period (his presidential term) any other emolument from the United States...."

The story goes back to September 1972, when we began investigating reports that the President had charged the taxpayers for personal expenditures on his vacation homes.

We uncovered facts which my associate, Brit Hume, laid before the construction engineer, William Robinson, on September 28, 1972. This was reported back to Washington in a classified memo.

"Mr. Hume identified himself as being from Jack Anderson's office," stated the memo, "and was aware that Bill Robinson was the contracting officer at the Western White House, including the residence.

"It was apparent from the conversation that Mr. Hume was aware of all the contracts, scope of work, dollar amounts and contract numbers for all of the work which was done by Bill....Mr. Hume said it appeared there was something fishy going on and said he would like to see the records."

Instead of producing the records, the government covered them up. Nevertheless, we were able to report on October 3, 1972, that the taxpayers had helped to renovate the President's old Spanish villa at San Clemente, Calif. The President even stuck the taxpayers, we reported, for $13,500 to buy a new furnace.

Subsequently, we wrote about many other personal expenditures which the President squeezed out of the taxpayers. These ranged from $388.78 to stop the fireplace in his den from smoking to $621 for an icemaker that would make ice cubes without a hole in the middle. Even the cost of stamping his golf tees with the presidential logo came out of the public till.

Now, the President may have to count these expenditures as personal, taxable income. The final ruling, of course, will be up to the Internal Revenue Service which has been working closely with the congressional tax investigation.

On the House side, some Republicans are quietly trying to narrow the impeachment inquiry and to eliminate the question of home improvements. But others believe these expenditures violated the Constitution and, therefore, may be an impeachable offense.

NIXON PLAY: President Nixon's fatcat friend and million- dollar campaign contributor, Richard Mellon Scaife, sought in the early 1970s to buy the Washington Star newspaper to bring a pro-Administration voice to the nation's capital.

Sources close to the deal tell us that the President enthusiastically promoted the idea. If the Star were sold to liberals, he reportedly told Scaife, "we would lose a good friend in Washington."

The city's strongest newspaper is the liberal Washington Post which Nixon has always detested-- all the more now because of its Watergate exposes.

Scaife controls many of the Mellon millions and is also a power in Gulf Oil. His former executive aide, Herbert Frayer, confirmed that Scaife had wanted to buy the Star. The early talks fell through, Frayer told my associate Les Whitten, because the Star's owners wanted too much money.

Frayer said he was unaware that President Nixon encouraged Scaife to buy the paper. "It might have happened when Mr. Scaife was alone with him," speculated Frayer. "In any case, we didn't need any assurance that the President thought this would fit in with his own thinking. Washington needs two vigorous newspapers."

In the end, the Star's owners decided not to sell but to strengthen the paper instead by buying out the Scripps-Howard Daily News. Today, the Star- News is a vigorous newspaper, which has both befriended and opposed the President editorially.

FOOTNOTE: Scaife didn't return our calls.

CATTLE CAPER: Assistant Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, who helped set up a $45 million federal beef-buying program to aid cattle producers, happens to be a well- to- do cattle producer himself. The plan is a bonanza for cattlement, but a bomb for the housewives because it will keep beef prices artificially high.

Although Yeutter's farm in Nebraska nets him about $15,000 to $20,000 a year from cattle, he told us he sees only a "nominal" conflict in the fact he reviewed and advised on the plan as a member of the Commodity Credit Board.

The bright young Ph.D., who served as the President's top agriculture campaign aide, says he will lose money because, as an Agriculture official, he did not use "hedges" against beef losses available to other cattlemen.

PAPER SHORTAGE
CAUSED BY PRICE CONTROLS

Supermarkets are asking shoppers to bring their own paper bags to the store to carry home their groceries. Many paper products are becoming scarce. Book and magazine publishers are worried that they won't be able to get enough paper to fulfill their commitments. Government paper supplies are the lowest in history.

This paper shortage, which affects everyone, stems from restrictive price controls. Low profits in the paper industry for several years have discouraged capital investment, and manufacturers are dropping money- losing lines.

Paper manufacturers are also selling more of their product overseas, where they can get a better return on their investment. According to J. Edmund Colloton Jr., manager of corporate financial and press relations at the St. Regis Paper Co., "For bleached raw pulp the price is $265 a ton in Europe and only $185 a ton in the U. S. In Japan they are paying even more. The controls simply have to be lifted to bring things into balance."

Union President Joseph Tonelli of the United Paperworkers agrees with management on this issue. He declares that the Cost of Living Council "must decontrol wages and prices in the paper industry. . . .Paper companies need profit levels that will permit them to generate internal cash. A higher rate of return on investment is essential in order to attract new additional capital if present needs are to be met." It's time the government displayed similar good sense.

The first parlors were built in monasteries — for conversation between the monks and members of the outside world. The word can be traced to the French and Middle English term "to speak."

Children 'learn by doing'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles written for The Week of the Young Child, which is being observed this week.)

Children learn and grow at an amazing rate. People, and many of the everyday objects children encounter in their early life, help children learn and, with a grown- up's help, the learning can become fun and challenging.

Children learn through playing, so today we are going to give mothers some ideas on how to make your child's toys and games more stimulating.

Remember, a few minutes of preplanning can lead to hours of fun and constructive play with or without mom being there. Also, it's not the completed project which is most important, but the process of learning through doing.

Children love to be praised for doing a good job and they like to see their works displayed. So help them grow and learn ... take a part in their activities.

Often parents are asked "What can I do?" when there is a toybox of goodies setting in the child's bedroom or playroom. The answer is generally "go play with your toys." Next time one of your youngsters asks that question, try this on him:

PLAY DOUGH

1 cup flour
½ cup salt
1 cup water
2 tbsp. oil
2 tsp. cream of tartar
food coloring

Mix ingredients together and cook for three minutes in nonstick pan. Turn out and cool and then knead for a few minutes. To store, put in air tight container.

FINGER PAINT

1 cup water
½ cup flour
food coloring

Mix water and flour with hands and add food coloring. One or two spoonfuls of soap flakes may be added.

Don't forget other such possibilities as oatmeal boxes, egg cartons, fabric scraps, yarn, plastic bottles (such as the ones liquid detergent comes from), shoe boxes, etc.

Your imagination can help build your child's imagination and teach him learning can be fun.

While we're at it, here's another possibility. Let your child help in the kitchen. Children often imitate their mother's cooking and washing dishes, but more often, they're interested in mixing ingredients. Let your child help with the mixing. Feeling is one way of learning, and they can also learn to distinguish different ingredients.

When making sandwiches, let children help spread the salads or take the wrappers off the bologna edges or cheeses. After cutting the sandwiches, let the children help arrange them, as well as pour the potato chips and help set the table.

Wanting to learn is what makes young children so enthusiastic. Help them become more enthusiastic and responsive by allowing them "adult jobs". Often stirring a cake or greasing a pizza pan can be a real treat to a child.

Always remember, too, that everyone learns best from first- hand experience, so be sure nutrition and good eating habits shouldn't be forgotten.

Flower care, arrangement discussed

Flower care and arrangement were discussed by Mrs. Ralph Carroll of Carroll's Florist at the April meeting of the Woman's Civic Club at the home of Mrs. Kermit Bird. Mrs. Carroll stressed that the new trend in flower arrangement is to follow personal tastes, rather than formal patterns, allowing each arranger's unique personality to be expressed.

Following Mrs. Carroll's talk, a dessert course was served by Mrs. Edgar Johnson, Mrs. Gene Potashnick, Mrs. Fae Brewer and Mrs. Myrtle Nunnelee.

Mrs. Roy Marks, president, conducted a brief business meeting and asked a spokesman for the executive committee to read a proposed amendment to the club's bylaws, regarding dues and membership regulations. Both sections of the amendment were voted on and accepted by the members present.

Mrs. James C. Adams and Mrs. Charles Goolsby were welcomed into the club as new members.

Mrs. W. G. Funk announced the memorial kitchen equipment for Wesley Methodist Church, honoring the late Mrs. Beatrice Dempster, had been presented.

Mrs. Gene Aufdenberg suggested the club purchase a new flag and flag holder for the Girl Scout troop it sponsors. The suggestion was approved.

The nominating committee submitted the following slate of officers and standing committee chairmen for the coming club year:

Mrs. Roy Marks, president; Mrs. Margaret Cain, vice president; Mrs. Tom Gleason, secretary; Mrs. Fae Brewer, treasurer; Mrs. Leon Garrett and Miss Almaretta Sidwell, special projects co- chairmen; Mrs. Mildred Canedy, program committee; Mrs. Robert Hope, hostess committee; Mrs. Ewart Taylor, attendance committee; Mrs. Harrison Tanner, membership committee; and Mrs. Carl Schorle, publicity committee.

The May meeting will feature a potluck dinner and card party May 7 at 12:30 p.m. in the Security Federal Savings and Loan Association community room.

Teacher concerned about young unwed girls who keep babies

Dear Ann Landers: I am a high school teacher who is deeply concerned about the tendency of unmarried teenage girls to keep their babies. They are often unstable immature and irresponsible. The child becomes an unwanted burden on "Grandma," who already has too much to do.

I tell these pregnant girls about the thousands of childless couples who could give their baby a world of love. I outline the advantages of growing up in a home with two devoted parents. They snap back with, "I NEED to keep my baby because it's all I have," or, "What would people think of me if I gave away my own flesh and blood?"

My sister, who is a social worker, relates heartbreaking stories about unwed, teenage mothers who are prostitutes, on drugs-- their children being bounced off the walls by drunken or drug- crazed boyfriends. Some beat their babies because they resent changing diapers or caring for a sick child.

How did this insane trend get started? I pray to God something can be done to reverse it. --Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear H.: The "trend" got started by far- out movie stars and entertainers who were involved with married men or became intentionally pregnant for some neurotic reason and didn't want to get married.

I happen to know of an unmarried woman (NOT a teenager) who decided to keep her child and she did a beautiful job of raising it. But such women are few and far between. Most teenagers who become pregnant out of wedlock would do well to heed your counsel.

Dear Ann Landers: When I saw the letter titled 'How To Be a Successful Mother- in-Law," I nearly lost my breakfast. (I read you in the morning paper.) 'One eye closed and one mouth shut," eh? The way I figue it she's a hypocrite.

If the dame noticed with one eye shut that her daughter-in- law hasn't had the living room slip- covers cleaned in three years, what do you think she'd have seen if she opened BOTH eyes? A housekeeper who would leave a filthy dishrag in the coner of a sink as its permanent resting place would give me heartburn.

Sorry, but I couldn't be so phony. I'd have to tell my daughter- in- law what I thought. I'm sure she'd admire my honesty.- For The Truth

Dear Truth: I'm not so sure she'd admire your honesty. Chances are she'd consider her soiled slip- covers and dirty dishrag none of your business.

I'd say one cosed eye and a closed mouth is not too big a price to pay for a good relationship with a daughter-in- law. Sorry about your heartburn.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been married three years. My husband is very handsome. When women keep bringing it up I get uncomfortable.

My parents live 900 miles away. They are not well enough to travel and I want to go visit them.

My husband likes them but they can't speak much English and I know he wouldn't enjoy going with me. Frankly, I'm afraid to leave him home because I've heard that men whose wives take vacations without them play around. Somehow they feel justified.

Tell me what to do. I'd die if anything happened to my marriage.-- Unsure In Long Island

Dear Un: A husband who is inclined to fool around will do so whether his wife is in town or out of town. Go visit your ailing parents and have a good time.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50c in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Dr. Hursh not convinced diet can affect heart attacks

By DR. LAURENCE M. HURSH
National Dairy Council Consultant

One of my pet peeves, admittedly, is the commercial effort in this country to scare people about heart disease. I just don't think people have to switch from saturated fats to polyunsaturated fats for fear of a heart attack.

There is no conclusive research evidence to show that people who maintain a decent weight and eat a reasonably balanced diet-- regardless of which fats they eat-- are going to have heart disease. All of the talk is based on studies and statistics that, to my mind, do not sufficiently rule out other factors enough to say "diet is what did it."

There are hunches galore. But if anybody knew anything solid, the National Heart and Lung Institute would not now be launching a screening of some 400,000 people to choose 12,000 for a five- year study to find out whether the incidence of heart disease can be lowered by efforts such as controlling the diet.

The trouble with that study, of course, is that even it will not surely settle the cholesterol controversy. Why? Because they are not planning the study in a way to isolate that one factor for measurement. Instead, they are going to work with 12,000 people in an effort to control several risk factors at once, like smoking, blood pressure, weight, and finally, diet.

So, if they are successful in statistically lowering heart disease among these folks, then we will know if you do all those things you might be better off. You won't know for sure that it will help you. But statistically, it will at least move you into a group that is expected to have less heart disease. Small pleasure if you still get a heart attack after all that.

Meantime, certain vegetable oil and "soft" margarine manufacturers ladle the airwaves and television with implorings that we should all switch to their products.

But here's my real message for today: You needn't switch to lower your blood cholesterol. There is right now, with no waiting, evidence from a Massachusetts Institute of Technology study that mere reduction of weight in obese individuals brought about a lowering of blood fat levels equal to or in excess of results obtained through diet changes or the use of drugs. Studies with patients under carefully controlled hospital conditions were carried out, each at least six months long, by Dr. Robert S. Lees.

Maintain Desirable Weight

His findings remind us again of the advisability of maintaining desirable body weight through sound nutritional habits. And doing that does not require you to go off on radical changes in your eathing habits. Just eat good meals and control your total caloric intake each day.

I'm not subscribing to the cholesterol- scare theory. I'm simply saying you'll feel better and if you don't want to worry about cholesterol, you can control its level in the simple way that Dr. Lees' research suggests. No fuss. No bother.

Henry hits 714th

CINCINNATI (AP) — "I've always thought that time was on my side," Hank Aaron said Thursday after the 40-year-old slugger unleashed a dramatic home run to tie Babe Ruth's all-time record of 714.

The Atlanta superstar's timeless chase of the legendary Ruth ended abruptly — on his first swing of the 1974 season when Aaron drilled a Jack Billingham fast ball over the left field fence in Riverfront Stadium.

"I still feel like I do owe fans in Atlanta a shot at 715," Aaron said, "but, yes, I am going to play Saturday.

"I'm certainly going to play the game the way it's supposed to be played and if I get a pitch to hit, I'll try to dispose of it."

The Braves had wanted to withhold Aaron from the three-game opening series in Cincinnati that continues Saturday and Sunday following an open date today. The club announced its intention, triggering controversy.

Bowie Kuhn, commissioner of baseball, said he expected the Braves to use Aaron as they had a year ago, playing roughly two of every three games.

The soft-spoken superstar wasn't placed in the line-up for certain until shortly before gametime and he responded with what the standing room only crowd of 52,154 had come to see.

The homer, a three-run blast, sailed over the 375-foot mark and came on a 3-1 count from the Cincinnati right-hander. Aaron had taken the only other strike, a letter-high fast ball.

"It was a good pitch," Aaron said. "I was guessing fast ball. He got it up a little."

Billingham said the pitch sailed on him, that it was a mistake and "he hits mistakes."

"He deserves it," Billingham said. "He's the greatest I've ever seen. It's unfortunate he hit it against me."

Billingham and Aaron met in the small room beneath the stadium where both faced interviews from a battery of newsmen. As the two passed each other, Billingham patted Aaron on the back and said softly, "Congratulations, but why did you have to do it on me."

Aaron merely chuckled.

The game was interrupted for six minutes as Vice President Gerald R. Ford, in town to toss out the first ball of the season, and Kuhn strolled onto the field to congratulate Aaron.

"This is a great day for you and a great day for baseball," Ford told Aaron. "Good luck for 715 and a good many more."

Kuhn praised Aaron as "not only one of the greatest professionals to play the game, but a great gentleman as well."

Aaron broke away from the swarm of teammates that greeted him at home plate and jogged to a box adjacent to the team's dugout where he kissed his wife, Billye, who had tears streaming down her cheeks.

It was his 96th home run against Cincinnati, including 54 in this city where professional baseball began in 1869.

Aaron said his initial excitement was dulled when the Braves blew a lead and lost 7-6 in 11 innings.

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins wrap up their National Hockey League season this weekend without the services of defenseman Gary Doak.

Area Witnesses attend conference

Sixty-three Sikeston area Jehovah's witnesses were among a capacity crowd attending a weekend convention at Poplar Bluff, according to David Thornton, presiding overseer of the Witnesses locally.

Thornton also stated that Jehovah's witnesses conduct home Bible studies with members of the public, and apparently quite a few of these came to make the total of 1,602 persons attending.

He also commented, "We plan to use the information received at this assembly not only in our personal lives, but also in our public house-to-house ministry, encouraging others to do more Bible research at home."

The Poplar Bluff gathering was a prelude to a much larger convention the Witnesses are to have in Little Rock, Arl,, June 27-30, 1974, when several thousand are expected to attend.

The gathering is one of 61 the Witnesses will hold in the United States this summer.

THE BIBLE

129. Samuel Warns the People

After Samuel had installed Saul as king, he gathered the people together and addressed them. He exhorted the people to tell him if he had ever cheated or defrauded them in any way, and they were forced to reply that he had not.

Then Samuel pointed out their sins, and called for rain and thunder during the wheat harvest (the driest season of the year) to prove that their asking for a king was evil in the eyes of the Lord. When the rain and thunder came, the people were greatly afraid and begged Samuel to pray for them because they had added to their other sins by asking for a king.

But Samuel delivered a stern warning to them: "...Fear not: ye have done all this wickedness; yet turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart; ...Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart: for consider how great things he hath done for you. But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king." (I Samuel 12:20-25 and turn any boat into a bass rig. Makes it easier to cast, control electric motor, steer.

here's the biggest fishing tackle news of the year . . . the brand-new Garcia Ambassadeur 5000D. The "D" stands for direct drive, and that's just what this exciting new reel has. But it also has much more. Unlike the direct-drive reels of years ago, the 5000D combines the power of its direct retrieve with the advantages of a smooth, adjustable drag and the casting ease of a free spool.

This is the reel that black bass fishermen all over the country have been asking us for. They want a reel to fish the heavy cover that bass inhabit. They know that the big ones are often found under or around lily pads, lurking near stumps and underwater brush, or in the shadows of undercut banks. They know that when a 'hawg' bass hits under these conditions, they have to pull him away from obstructions fast if they're going to get him. They use heavy line and plenty of muscle.

This is the kind of fishing for which the 5000D was designed. Since pinpoint casting is important for bass hunting, the 5000D has the famous Ambassadeur anti-backlash centrifugal brake (upper left) and spool tension control with reminder setting, plus a convenient free spool that disengages everything but the level wind. And the fully adjustable knurled drag (lower left) works only when you want it to . . . when your hand is off the grips. When you retrieve with the 5000D, you're back in direct drive, ready to sock it to that big one before he can head into the brush. The 5000D. The lunker-stopper that teaches the bass who's boss.

BESS MYERSON — RECALLS SOUND ADVICE

Bess Myerson has long been an unusual woman, and in a variety of achievements -- as a talented Miss America winner, concert pianist, television and radio commentator, newspaper columnist, magazine editor, community leader and champion of consumer rights.

That makes her a perspicacious choice to host "Women of the Year, 1974," the second annual awards ceremony honoring eight outstanding women in different careers. The special will be broadcast live from Avery Fisher Hall at New York's Lincoln Center on Monday, April 8 (9:00-10:00 PM., CDS) on the CBS Television Network.

The Women of the Year being honored were among those nominated by the readers of Ladies' Home Journal and finally selected by a panel of 16 distinguished women leaders. The program will also feature entertainment and filmed interviews.

"I'm pleased to be part of the awards program," Miss Myerson said. "It's really special, with an important purpose, which it serves well -- and does it entertainingly. I think it will appeal to a wide audience, both women and men. There should never be any 'communication gap' when exceptional achievements are being celebrated, especially achievements that benefit everyone. These eight women have earned everyone's attention -- and may their tribe increase."

"I don't think any of the eight women we're honoring know my mother," Miss Myerson said, "but they've learned the same lesson my mother taught her three daughters: set a worthy goal; work hard, without despair, to achieve it; don't accept other people's definitions of what you place in life must be; and make the effort itself as worthy as the goal.

Anne Murray Is Going Semi-Hip

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Anne Murray is in the process of changing her image from the girl next door and singer of country and middle of the road songs to something a little more hip. She'd like to play to the kind of college audiences that Kris Kristofferson does and sing that kind of modern country, with freedom to mix in other styles.

Two years with Glen Campbell on TV, some duo personal appearances and a duet album with him gave her the image most listeners have of the Canadian singer. "Last summer Glen asked me to go out on the road with him. I explained I can only ride on his coattails so long. I got to do my own thing.

"I have my own band. We've got to go out and do it, got to play clubs that are semihip, colleges and small halls that seat no more than 3,000 so you can put in a good sound system and people get their money's worth. I played Greensboro, N.C., in a place that seated 17,000. They told me it would be 6,000. Only 1,700 showed up. I found out later that right next door there was a 2,500-seat auditorium, which would have been perfect. That's the kind of thing you go through.

"The guys in the band have stuck with me three years. The money hasn't been great. There are seven guys. They have faith that one day it is really going to happen, if we continue not to compromise ourselves. Even if it doesn't, we're having a good time now, living day by day and thanking God for our blessings."

Miss Murray has one gold single, "Snowbird." "Danny's Song, the single, sold 850,000. "The important thing is to get in the top 10, which that was. It's not important to have a gold record. I don't need any more gold; I've got one. Some people want to line their walls with them. Who needs that?"

There was talk when "Snowbird" came out that it was a drug song. "There's some truth to me being the girl next door; with the image I'm trying to portray, maybe I should say that it is. But I know it is not a drug song. Gene MacLellan was walking along a beach on Prince Edward Island in late fall, almost into winter. He saw snowbirds — snow buntings — round, white birds — on the beach. It conjured up a whole image to him. Gene had been in love a few times and thrown over. That is what the song is all about."

Ocean had a hit with MacLellan's "Put Your Hand in the Hand." "I was the first to record it. It was supposed to be my followup to 'Snowbird.' But the powers that be in New York didn't think it sounded like 'Snowbird' and didn't think it sounded like me. They had no idea what I sounded like. We wanted it to be the next single. They didn't. Another mistake."

Miss Murray was born in Spring Hill, Nova Scotia. After college, she taught physical education for one year on Prince Edward Island. "The summer of 1966 I auditioned for a TV show out of Halifax, a network show, a summer replacement. I had to make some money to buy a car for the first year teaching. I sang mainly in a chorus. It started in the late 1950s as a sing-along show. By the time I got to it, it was into the folk rock thing, country too, variety with group singing. I got to do one solo and one duet. They were calling me to come over to Halifax and do TV shows.

The second year I had to make a decision as to whether to go back to teaching or give show business a try. They had a TV show I could do all year. Show business seemed very insecure; teaching, you get your check every two weeks. I decided to do it — to give myself a year. I got a little bored that year; the show was just horrible. The next summer I did the replacement show again. The next fall I decided I was going to get out and learn something about clubs and concerts on the east coast of Canada. I got packed houses; people knew I was a Maritimer. I recorded an album on a budget Canadian label in 1968. It sold pretty well in the Maritime provinces.

"He told me to remember I was the best singer in the world and he was the best producer, so we weren't going to be taken advantage of. They all said the same thing. They'd give us $3,000 and have complete charge of production. We walked into Capitol and by this time we were really getting heavy. We almost believed we were as good as we said. Paul White there told us, anything we want.

"We did the 'Snowbird' album. It cost $18,000. When they saw the bill they weren't happy but within eight months they were very happy." All six of Miss Murray's albums are on Capitol. Her seventh, "Love Song," will come out this month.

DOC SEVERINSEN
Music Director, 'The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson' Mondays-Fridays, NBC Television Network (In Color, 10:30 p.m.- 12:00 Midnight

Doc Severinsen has become one of the popular music world's best- known trumpet soloists and conductors. In a lighter vein, he's also recognized as television's "man of wild, mod attire." As far as Doc is concerned, his fame is the result of being music director of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Don's musical activities now extend far beyond his nightly musical chores on NBC- TV. He has hosted "The Midnight Special" and starred in the Peabody Award-winning special, "The Timex All- Star Swing Festival," both on NBC- TV.

Severinsen, who is as familiar with the classics as he is with works of contemporary composers, has been music director of the "Tonight Show" since Oct. 9, 1967. He joined that program when it started on NBC- TV Oct. 1, 1962. His awards are numerous, including repeat honors in the trumpet and conductor categories of Playboy's All- Star Jazz and Pop Polls.

He was born July 7, 1927, in Arlington, Ore. Although he was christened Carl, he soon became known as "Little Doc" because his father, the town dentist, was called "Big Doc." Severinsen recalled: "My father was an excellent violinist and he wanted me to learn to play that instrument. I didn't want to. I wanted to play the trombone." He persisted and when the elder Severinsen yielded, Doc received a trumpet because that was the only horn available at the local music store.

His dad gave him lessons and three weeks after he started practicing, Doc was playing in the high school band. When he was 12, he won the state band contest and the Music Educators' national competition. Even before finishing high school, he went on the road with Ted Fiorito's band. He returned to Arlington long enough to graduate. Another trip on the road was interrupted by a year's service in the Army.

Following his discharge, Doc toured with bands led by Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Charlie Barnett and Ted Fiorito. In 1949, when he was 22, Doc joined NBC as a staff musician, playing for such performers as Dinah Shore, Kate Smith, Eddie Fisher and Steve Allen.

Severinsen continues to practice at least two hours a day and when time allows, raises quarter horses, both for breeding and racing purposes.

He is married to a high school classmate, the former Evonne Evans, who shares his life- long love of horses. The Severinsens have five children.
